Babe Slams Out His 49th After Nine-Day "Vacation"

Waite Hoyt Pitches Airtight Ball After Washington Scores Three Runs in First Inning With Help of Two Errors; Erickson Severely Battered

By Charles A. Taylor

The Yankee Special kept booming along on its way to Pennantville yesterday when the Senators met their fifth straight defeat at the hands of the local club. The score was 9 to 3. "Babe" Ruth took a personal hand in the spurt of the Hugmen by poling out his forty-ninth homer of the season. "Babe" had been taking a nine-days' vacation in circuit-clouting, and many of the fans feared he was losing the knack of making them. But all doubts were set at rest in the seventh inning when the Swat Sultan swatted the ball so hard that few in the stands were able to tell what

Earlier in the game, in the first inning to be exact, Captain Roger Peckin-paugh had knocked a homer into the left-field bleachers, so as far as homerunning went it was a fairly satisfactory afternoon.

Winsome Waite Hoyt, of Flatbush, and Leif Erickson were the moundsmen when the game started. Kid Hoyt remained to the finish and gave a masterly exhibition of the art of pitching, but poor old Leif, after being battered into an unrecognizable state, reeled from the field at the end of the sevent the Glants will be in first place by the margin of half a game.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—Pitcher Standey Coveleskie, of the champion Indians, returned from Detroit to-day to undergo examination by Dr. H. M. Castle, oblive physician, as to the extent of the strain to Coveleskie's side sustained in a game yesterday in Detroit.

Dr. Castle could not state how long Coveleskie might be out of the game.

Dr. Hotsel Coveleskie might be out of the game.

The intercostal muscles of the player's right side are sprained and there is a possibility the fibers may be separated, Dr. Castle said.

Separating Giants From the Pirates

The two leading National League clubs have won the same number of games, but the Giants have lost one more than the Pirates. It is now possible for McGraw's players to jump into the lead to-day if they can defeat the Dodgers at Ebbets Field and the Cardinals score another victory over the Pirates. Scott Stretches Playing

String to 800 Contests

BOSTON, Sept. 2.—Captain Everett Scott, of the Red Sox, playing at shortstop against the Athletics at Fenway Park to-day, took part in his 800th consecutive major league game.
His continuous play, long since a record, started June 20, 1916. If world series contests and exhibition games were included it would be at least fifty games greater.

The modern record for continuous play was held formerly by Fred Luderus, of the Philadelphia Nationals, who in 1919 completed 533 consecutive games. The longest known previous record of organized baseball, 577 games without a break, was made by George Pinckney, of the Brooklyn
American Association team over a period from 1885 to 1890.

Mack Offers to Trade Perry CORNING, N. Y., Sept. 2.—In a telegram received to-day by Scott Perry, Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, offers Perry his old berth. If Perry is not inclined to return, Mack says the way is open for him to play on any other American League team that will bid for his services.

The Supreme Test

When you know you're not quite there As the big show-down is on, When you feel impending care. As your final chance looks gone And yet-there is no reason Why your touch is out of season, In the grip of fate's rough thrall-Believe me, O believe me, That's the toughest spot of all!

great prize at stake. It may be only a match between duffers or unknowns, where the result at least is important to those involved. But when on that day you suddenly discover that for no known reason, no explainable cause, you are all out of gear, the normal result is panic, dismay, we have a subject to the cause, you are all out of gear, the normal result is panic, dismay, we have a subject to the cause, you are all out of gear, the normal result is panic, dismay, we have a subject to the cause, you are all out of gear, the normal result is panic, dismay, we have a subject to the cause of the cause

Meeting the Shock

In the course of beating back and forth among championship holders in various lines, we made a point of asking each what he considered the hardest test in sport.

Almost without exception each nominated the Off-day Feeling on

It may be Tilden, Johnston, Evans, Jones, Ruth, Cobb, or any other. He comes to the big occasion, confident of a fairly simple triumph. He is feeling well enough; he has no excuses to offer. And then suddenly, without any apparent cause, he discovers that his touch is gone, To Triumph Over Reds that his form is soggy, that he can do nothing right. He may have slept well the night before and his digestion may be perfect. He may have trained as carefully as he knew how to train. But here he is in a tough spot with no coordination, unable to make himself do the things he knows well enough he can do with ease and skill nineteen times out of twenty.

There's the big shock of the game. And unless an entry has superb control over his nervous system the collapse may be complete.

The Unexplainable

Mathewson has told us how on certain days, without any reason, he suddenly discovered in some game that his control was bad and that he could not put the ball where he wanted it to go.

He has explained how his arm felt 100 per cent O. K., how his physical condition was at the top and how there was an utter absence of nervous-

"But after a ball or two," he said, "I found that I could no longer cut the inside and outside corners. The harder I worked the worse I seemed to get. The reason? There wasn't any that I could ever locate. All I knew were the main facts in the case, which happened to be an unexplainable inability to do anything right."

Certain Upsets

This off-day, or off-form, feeling has undoubtedly accounted for numerous upsets. It may easily have been the reason Dempsey failed to get going against Brennan.

But it is more prevalent in golf than any other sport, for the relationship among nerve, muscle and brain is more delicately set up in golf

This is why a Bob McDonald can fail to qualify in one championship and then, a week later, against almost the same field, lead the pack. It helps to explain why Hutchison can win the British open one week and a few weeks later fail to finish among the first ten in the American open. For Hutchison knew, after hitting two or three blows, that he was off and out of gear. And on the final day at St. Andrew's Barnes dropped

This may be taken as a new form of the alibi. You can call it alibi, or whatever you care to, but any man who has ever entered a competition of any sort understands the feeling-the sudden lack of touch and form without a reason for the slip. What is the best way to meet it? To preserve, as far as possible, the right sort of mental balance in the hope that one enight get going again. But the usual aftermath is a series of headlong dives into sure defeat.

The belief among many that in a square match the best man always wins is incorrect. He wins most of the time, but there are always days when the best man, over a long stretch, will be outclassed by some one not even close to his standard of form.

Nautilus Puts Alera to Rout In Yacht Race

By BRIGGS

Hatfield's 30-Footer Turns Tables on Belknap's Craft; Morgan's Boat Is Beaten

Special Correspondence of The Tribune OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 2. yachtsmen who are gathered here for the week-end races of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club had no better time to-day than they had in the first regatta yesterday. There was practically no wind all day. So light was the breeze at the scheduled starting hour that it was necessary to postpone the races for a time. Finally the old southwest breeze came in cat's paws across the Sound, and in the lightest of light airs the fleet was sent off on a short race.

The fleet was larger than it was yesterday, and it included one new class. Interest again centered in the 30-foot division of the New York Yacht Club. In this class the Nautilus, the property of M. E. Hatfield, turned the tables and defeated F. W. Belknap's Alera for the prize.

In the Victory class the winner was H. M. Curtis's Mongolia, which beat Mary Rose, the property of Junius S. Morgan ir., by almost four minutes over a six-mile course. In the S Class of sloops Commodore Ralph Ellis's Ellen again was the first boat home. The winner in the new Pequot R Class was Gredmar, the property of H. L. Lloyd.

I. E. Raymond's Little Hope was the winner among the one-dosign yachts of the Stamford Yacht Club. In the Star class G. W. Elder jr. won in his Saturn. The Fly was the first home in the 15-foot division of the Seawanhaka Club, a class that did not fill yesterday. A large fleet of Fish boats came to the line, the winner being Sculpin, the property of Franklin Remington.
